From the beginning to the end you hear of materials.
Concrete for the pads, plywood for the huts,
Cables for the wiring, pipe for the tanks,
Laterite for the road, lumber for the frames.

Yet . . . when you stop with some welcome slack
And tip back the cup with genuine Kool Kan water
And you wonder what makes it all go . . .
Where is the real motor,
Your mind's eye focuses on the one material
That gives it all definition.

The men who work beside you, who drink with you
Who stand quarters before sunrise with you —
They are the reality of it all.

When all is forgotten about Quang Tri
These men will still hang around in memories,
And to these men this book is dedicated.

— Jerry Emison —

128's World War II Heritage

The 128th Naval Construction Battalion (Pontoon) was activated on 28 September 1944 at Camp Endicott with Lieutenant Commander Alexander C. HUSBAND, CEC, USN as Commanding Officer. The greater portion of Battalion Detachments 1006 and 1057, pontoon veterans of Salerno, Anzio and Normandy formed the nucleus of the 128th. After a brief training period, the 1200 man Battalion went to Camp Parks, Pleasanton, California, for further training. On 25 November the Battalion boarded the USS SIBLEY for duty in the Pacific Ocean area.

The invasion of Okinawa and other Ryukyu Islands, one of the major amphibious operations of the war, saw the reconvergence of several 128 platoons. Four days before D-Day three causeways platoons of the 128th landed with a force of Marines in Kerama Retto, a small group of islands off Okinawa, and emplaced causeways while under air attack and sniper fire. The main force hit the western beaches on Okinawa on D-Day, Easter Sunday, 1 April 1945, and 669 men of the Battalion took part in the assault. The 128 Seabees had the first causeway in the water by 0800 on D-Day and had beached several causeways by noon. Troops, ammunition, fuel and cargo were landed by pontoon barges by the day after D-Day. At Red Beach, a 1,425 foot floating pontoon pier was in operation by 3 April. In all, the platoons placed 28 sets of two-section pontoon causeways. More than 64,000 troops landed dry-shod, and over 110,000 tons of cargo were unloaded over these structures, which were used more extensively than in any previous Pacific operation.

The operational platoons returned to Guam from May through July where they were outfitted and redeployed to various locations. Pontoon operations continued after V-J Day; in September and October 1945 about 450 men of the Battalion participated in the landing occupation forces in Japan, Korea, and China.

In late October 1945, the platoons deployed to Japan, Korea, and China returned to Guam where they were joined by platoons returning from other locations. The 128 Seabees prepared for redeployment home and were inactivated to other units for the stateside return. The Battalion was deactivated at Guam on 20 November 1945.

CHANGE OF COMMAND

On April 19, 1969 CDR Joseph J. GAWARKIEWICZ, III relieved CDR Donald W. WITTSCHIEBE as Commanding Officer of Mobile Construction Battalion 128.

COMMANDING OFFICER

On 19 April 1969, I assumed Command of United States Naval Mobile Construction Battalion 128. As your Commanding Officer, each succeeding day since then has been filled with personal feelings of satisfaction and pride with your unexcelled performance.

Each of you has made significant contributions to the outstanding success of the Battalion on this deployment. The construction in and around the Quang Tri area stands as a monument and testimonial to the loyalty and devotion to duty, the professionalism and the ingenuity, and the "Can Do" spirit exhibited by you, the officers and men of 128.

A great many of you who took part in recommissioning the Battalion in the Spring of 1967 and have completed two deployments in the Republic of Vietnam will be leaving us for other duty or returning to civilian life. I commend you for your outstanding performance in the service of your country, for the attainment of freedom for the people of the Republic of Vietnam. I wish you God's speed and the best for you and your families in all your future endeavors.

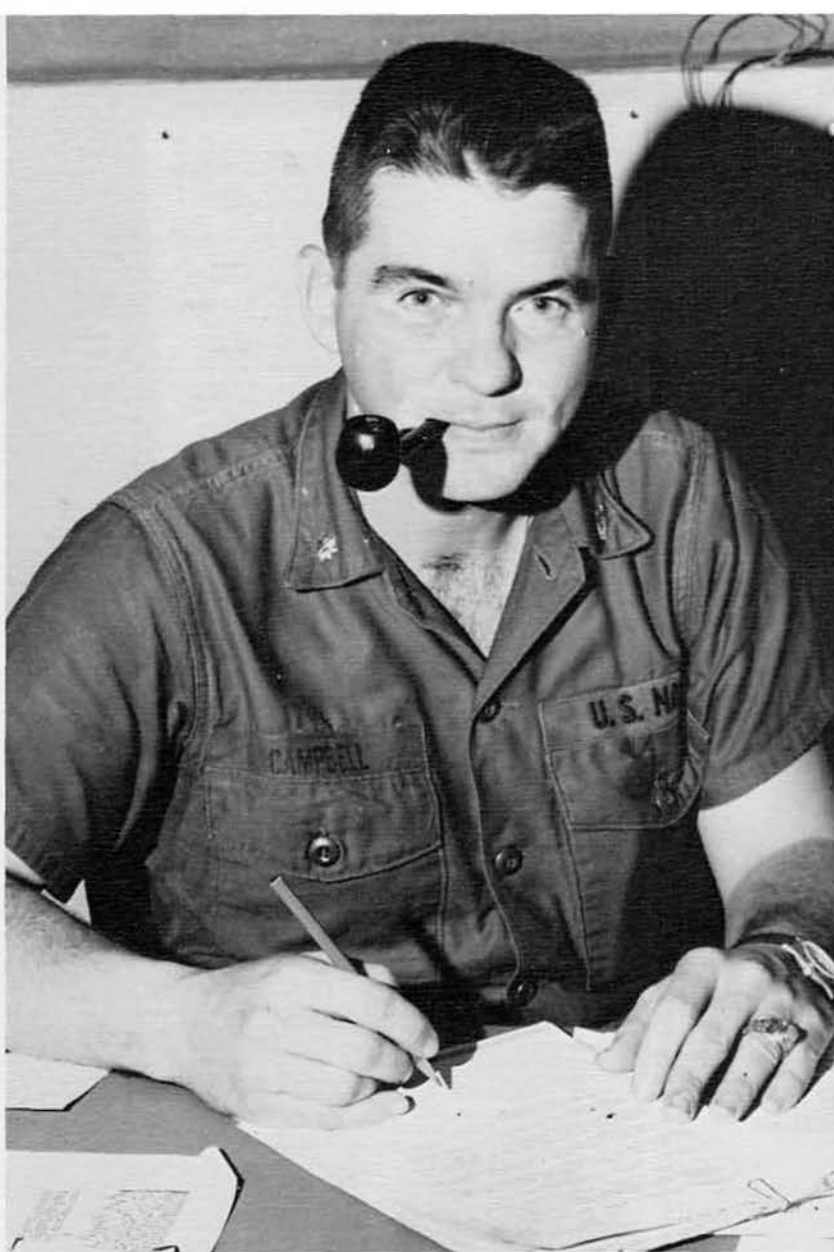

The remainder staying with MCB 128 must form the nucleus to build on the experiences of this deployment in order that this Battalion will reach even greater levels of readiness for future deployments, wherever they may be. I am confident that we will accomplish this.

Finally, I deeply appreciate what you have accomplished. I am most grateful to have the privilege and the truly rewarding experience of serving with you.

JOSEPH J. GAWARKIEWICZ, III
Commander, U. S. Navy
Commanding Officer, MCB 128

EXECUTIVE OFFICER

LCDR DONALD B. CAMPBELL

We've had a lot of inspections during the period that this book covers — Administrative inspection, Personnel inspection, Supply inspection, weapons inspections, equipment inspections, and others. Each of these inspections is a test of how good we are — what we can do. I believe that our deployment here to Camp Rhodes is nothing but another inspection-test. Personally, some of us have passed this test — some haven't; but as a Construction Battalion we have collectively passed with flying colors. As I look at the new road, the Children's hospital, the tremendous aircraft parking and hanger facilities, the water treatment plant, dozens of rigid frame steel buildings and hundreds of sea huts, I'm sure we've passed. Each one of us is a better man for our efforts here, and I am proud to serve with each one of you.

WELCOME HOME PARTY

WINING, DINING AND DANCING . . . MCB 128's "You Earned It" party at the Broadwater Beach Hotel in Biloxi attracted a large attendance of Battalion personnel and their wives or dates. The party, sponsored by Special Services, featured an open bar and dinner of a choice of Lobster or steak. A combo of musicians enlivened the activities with a variety of dance music.

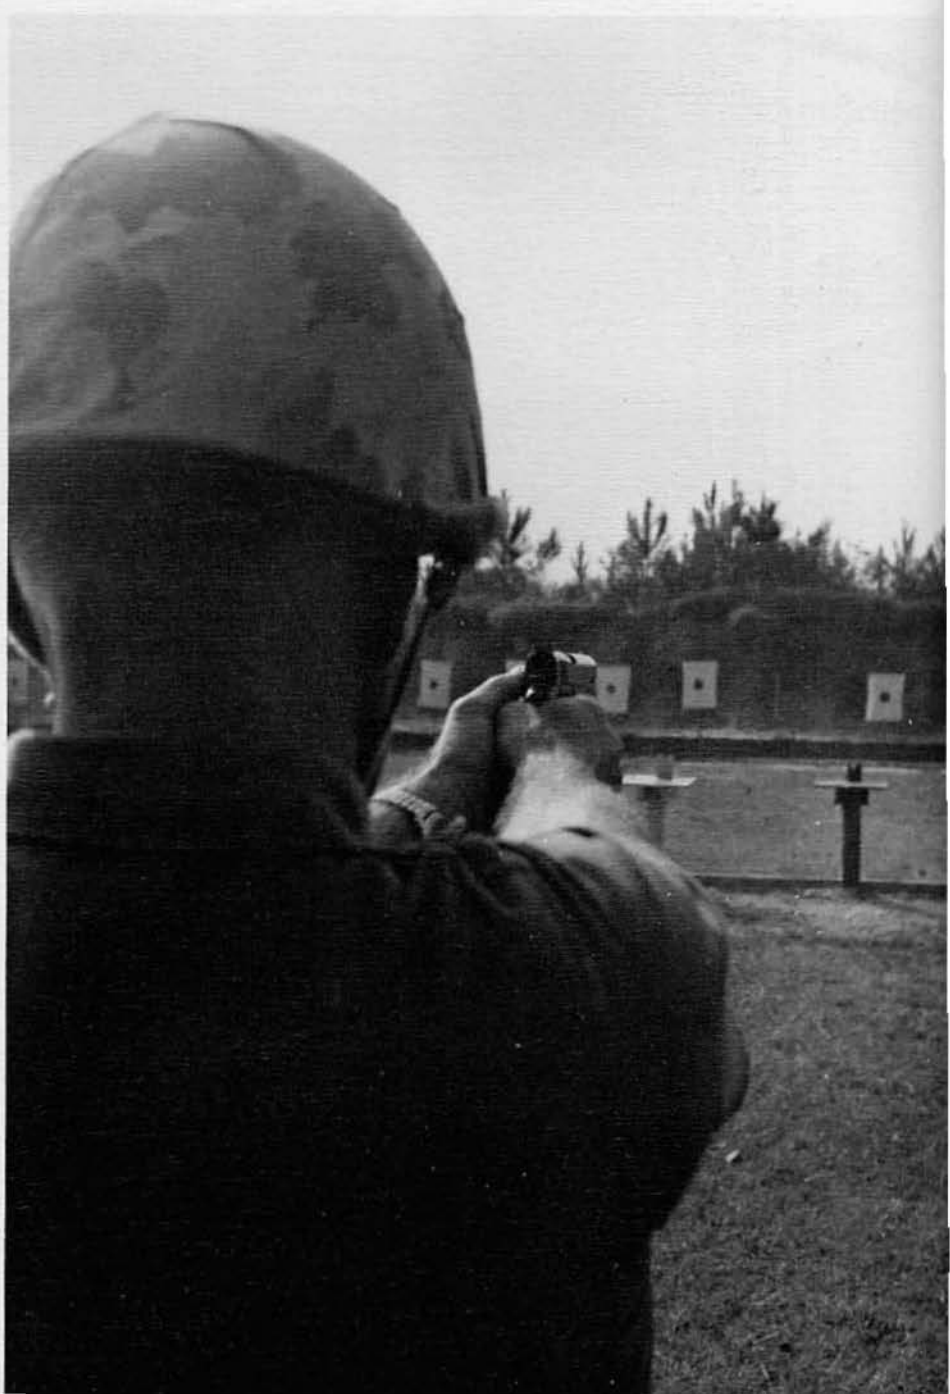

HOMEPORT PROJECTS

TRAINING

Most of the Battalion's tactical training was done at Keesler Air Force Base and Camp Lejeune Marine Base in North Carolina.

Training that would help prepare for the unforeseeable dangers that the coming months might bring was given to all the Seabees.

Alpha Company's big equipment and Seabees bulldozed, scraped, dug and plowed their way through another successful Vietnam deployment. The primary function of the Battalion's largest company is equipment operation, automotive mechanics and transportation. The Alpha 'Bees moved thousands of tons of earth and rock in the construction of the Quang Tri Airfield parking aprons, a 12 mile section of National Route One, the ASP and many other important construction projects. The mechanics worked day and night keeping the equipment repaired and on the road. Pumping gas, washing trucks, changing tires, greasing axles, changing spark plugs and other equipment oriented jobs were everyday occurrences. Alpha Company literally paved the way for the Battalion's productive and successful deployment.

Bravo Company Seabees, responsible for camp maintenance, made living a little more comfortable at Camp Rhodes. The Battalion's public works company is composed primarily of electricians and utilities men. Climbing poles, burying pipes, pumping water and supplying electricity, the Bravo 'Bees all worked toward a better camp. In addition to on-camp jobs, the company crews have been responsible for the completion of a water treatment and distribution plant and an electrical distribution system and many other projects around the Quang Tri Combat Base. They have laid miles of pipe line and strung electrical and communications lines throughout the base area. Their efforts have contributed to the Battalion's successful deployment.

LTJG RICHARD C. JOHNSON

Charlie Company consists primarily of builders and steelworkers. During the deployment they were responsible for a majority of the construction on berthing facilities, office structures, chow halls, shops and many other buildings on the Quang Tri Combat Base. Both wooden frame and steel buildings, as well as metal storage tanks were credited to the Charlie 'Bees. Concrete foundations, parking areas, bunkers and sidewalks, grease racks and many other similiar structures were poured at every construction site on the base. Two Charlie Company projects were a 1000 man galley and a 500 man galley. Another major project was the construction of two bridges, one large and one small, on National Route One. Gathered together in one spot, Charlie Company's many buildings would resemble a small city. Their contributions to the Battalion's successful deployment is evident throughout the combat base.
