PERSONNEL AND SHIPS' DATA
BARBARY WARS

PREFACE

This Register of officers and ships of the Navy during the years 1801 through 1807 will supplement the operational material in Naval Documents related to the United States Wars with the Barbary Powers, six volumes of which have already been published. The additional data on personnel and ships should be of value not only to historians but also to genealogists, artists, model builders, and naval architects.

Part I, Personnel, endeavors to list all the commissioned, warrant, and acting officers both of the Navy and Marine Corps during the years 1801 through 1807, stating the various duty assignments of each. All the material is from official sources, but there may be omissions because of incomplete records and failure to report some changes of duty and appointments at distant stations. The Office of Naval Records and Library will be glad to have these drawn to its attention. The initials P. E. A. mean Peace Establishment Act; and ran means deserted.

Part I has been prepared by Mrs. Alma R. Lawrence. She was assisted by Miss Loretta I. MacCrimble, Mrs. Fay A. King, Miss Mabel I. Welde, Miss Catherine MacDonnell, Mrs. Frances M. Holmes, and Miss Georgia Freese.

Part II, Ships' Data, has been compiled from many sources, all contemporary and authentic, but much about our early naval vessels was not known even in the Navy Department when the vessels were still in existence. Additional material will be welcomed by the Office of Naval Records and Library.

The form in which the data are presented requires definitions for those headings not self-explanatory. Cost is the total expenditure made to prepare the vessel for duty, unless otherwise noted. Agent is the individual or firm who handled the business details for the Navy Department. The builder had actual charge of constructing the vessel. In Commission is the earliest date when the vessel is known to have been fully prepared for duty. Principal dimensions: great care has been taken to attain uniformity so that an accurate basis of size comparison is possible. Unless noted by specific wording or by an asterisk length means that of the gun deck from the fore part of the rabbit of the stem to the after part of the wing transom; breadth denotes the extreme width at the widest point including both wales; depth is the measurement from the limber strake to the top of the deck beam. Since the method of calculating tonnage varied widely in different ports it has been impossible to attain any uniformity. Complement: because of frequent changes in the size of ships' crews these figures must be considered the number of men required to work and fight a given vessel. Battery: this gives the number and size of the guns in the main battery but does not include light pieces such as swivels and top howitzers. Spar dimensions: since the masting and sparring of vessels was left largely to the preferences of commanding officers, changes were made constantly. The sizes listed are those in actual use in the year noted. The lengths given are whole lengths with mast heads and yard arms included. Diameters are omitted as masts generally followed a rule of 1 inch to 3 feet of length and yards 1 inch to about every 5 feet. Light spars such as studdingsail yards and booms are not listed because of space limitations. The tabulation of gunboats is the first known to appear in print. There are much data missing from the Navy Archives about these vessels and much found there are contradictory but all data presented have been carefully sifted and are believed to be accurate.

The plans of vessels reproduced in this volume are all taken from originals in the National Archives or Library of Congress. The photographs for the plates were the work of Lt. Kenneth L. Morton AUS and Mr. John J. Keegan, both formerly members of the staff of the Division of Photographic Archives and Research, National Archives. It is only through their skill in reproducing these badly stained and in some instances mutilated drawings that it has been possible to present facsimiles of these plans. Mutilations are indicated by a wavy line. This office is also greatly indebted to Dr. Vernon D. Tate, Dr. W. Neil Franklin, and Mr. Charles L. Perry, Jr., of the National Archives for their aid in expediting the photographic work.

Part II has been prepared by Lieutenant M. V. Brewington, U. S. N. R. with the assistance of Mrs. Alma R. Lawrence and Miss Mabel I. Welde in the preparation of the vessel histories.

Captain, U. S. Navy (Retired),

OTHER GUNBOATS

The following gunboats were built or were under contract during the period up to December 31, 1807. Only a minimum of information concerning their building periods is available. The exact places of construction are doubtful in many instances and as some of the contractors, particularly those on the Western Rivers, were politicians rather than shipbuilders, the real builders are rarely known. The launching dates are in most instances unknown, but those completed were usually laid up in ordinary and the few commissioned saw only patrol service. A schooner rig was given to #11 and #12, the plan of #12 being National Archives 80-7-18. A sloop rig was given to #13 through #22 with the following spar dimensions:

Main mast	57'	head 7'	Topmast	24'	head 4'
Bowsprit outboard	18'
Crossjack yard	32'		Gaff	25'
Topsail yard	23'		Boom	50'

All were equipped to row either end foremost but the bow rudder was omitted. A plan of these boats is believed to be either that in the Fox Papers, Peabody Museum or that in the Preble Papers, 3436, Library of Congress. The remaining designs were built to at least three and perhaps five designs: #23 to 27 inclusive, design not known; #29 to 45 inclusive that of Commodore Edward Preble, plan National Archives 80-7-12; #46 to 57 inclusive that of Captain Charles Stewart, plan not known; #7 and #58 to 69 inclusive that of Captain James Barron, plan not known; and #79 to 88 inclusive and #93 to 115 inclusive, plan not known. The missing numbers were assigned to vessels built at a later period.
